Approval of Minutes

1. Action: The Minutes of 29 September 1953 (IAC-M-123) were approved.

IAC Policy on Approval of Appendices to NIEs

2. Action: The IAC (a) rescinded its action of 4 September 1952 relating to appendices (IAC-M-81 Revised, Item 2); (b) instructed the Board and the IAC representatives to hold the use of appendices and their length to a minimum consistent with the adequate presentation of estimates; and (c) agreed to act upon such appendices as are found to be necessary in the same manner as upon any other part of the estimate. The Board was further instructed to insure the earliest practicable notice to the IAC agencies whenever the scope of the intelligence requirement, particularly if levied by the NSC, indicated a need for appendices.

Watch Committee
Indications Center

3. Action: Agreed to form a special committee to conduct a thorough and prompt review of the watch process and prepare recommendations for the IAC and, ultimately, the NSC. The committee will consider as an initial step a paper to be prepared and circulated by CIA and thereafter such other papers, including the subject proposal tabled by General Willems, as the agencies submit. The agencies are to nominate a highly placed officer to Mr. Huntington Sheldon, CIA/OCI, who will call the first meeting, at which time the committee will select a chairman and adopt its procedures.

4. Discussion: The DCI stated that he felt that the existing Watch Committee was a great improvement over the situation prior to its creation, but that developments over the past years (including the atomic progress of the USSR, the increasing problem of continental defense, and the concurrent growth in importance of economic and political factors) made it desirable to reexamine the scope and limitations of the watch process, how that process can best function, and what major problems are involved. It was the sense of the meeting that such a reexamination was desirable.

General Samford said that the watching process is a most difficult matter, and he was doubtful that we had even accurately defined the problem. It seemed to him, he said, that since the watching process inevitably transcends the ability of any one agency or of the military services, the broad leadership of the DCI was required. General Porter agreed that the leadership of CIA was needed in this important intelligence function. Mr. Dulles stated that he had no preconceived notions regarding the outcome of the special committee but felt that General Samford's remarks should be fully considered, along with other ideas, by that committee.

With respect to graphical or mathematical processing of indications, it was believed that these should be explored, but the danger of stressing such methods to the exclusion of analytical appraisal of the indicators and their implications was pointed out.

General Cabell emphasized that a distinction must be preserved between the process of watching and the process of estimating, and that, to assure that this distinction is maintained, clear terms-of-reference and procedures must be provided the watch mechanism.

Approval of Minutes

1. Action: The Minutes of 6 October 1953 (IAC-M-124) were approved.

Capabilities and Probable Courses of Action of the ROK with Respect to an Armistice

2. Action: Approved as amended.

First Annual Progress Report of the SEC
(IAC-D-74)

3. Action: Noted, and agreed to delete the last two sentences of paragraph V.A. (The Secretary will disseminate a revised page 4).

4. Discussion: General Porter questioned that it would in every instance be desirable to submit the scientific and technical contributions to national intelligence to the SEC prior to submission to ONE. He feared that this might restrict the agencies' access to ONE. It was pointed out that the SEC's intended objective was to improve the mechanism for implementing the direction (in paragraph 2c of DCID-3/4) that the SEC "integrate scientific and technical intelligence, as and when required, for the production of national intelligence," and synthesize departmental intelligence. It was the sense of the meeting that it was desirable to maintain flexibility in the developing procedures of the SEC.

6. Action: Agreed that the Department of State would prepare an initial draft of terms of reference for an estimate on Tito's probable courses of action in the event of a turnover [redacted] for consideration of the Board and IAC representatives.

7. Discussion: Mr. Dulles stated that he had just briefed the NSC on the short-range situation in Trieste. Several members commented on the explosive nature of the situation and the necessity of maintaining a close watch.

Estimate of the World Situation
(NIE-90)

3. Action: Approved as amended.

4. Discussion: The Deputy Director for Intelligence, The Joint Staff, observed that an estimate of this type, drawing as it must on various existing estimates, and attempting in some instances to paraphrase them, ran the risk of changing or appearing to change the conclusions of those estimates. He felt that it was a disservice to the planners to have two sets of views current and that the difficulty of avoiding that situation might make it preferable not to produce National Estimates of this type. It was pointed out that ONE had earlier produced several uncoordinated estimates of the world situation, and that IAC coordination had been undertaken in this case at the request of the IAC agencies. Several members commented on the progress achieved by thus compelling a review of extant estimates and changing conclusions as warranted.

[It was recognized that changed conclusions should be based on new information or evaluation and not develop merely because of faulty paraphrasing of underlying estimates.]

Proposed amendment to minutes of IAC meeting of 20 October 1953 (IAC-M-126)

In paragraph 4:

1. After the second sentence, insert the following new sentences:

" It was recognized that any broad estimate of this sort necessarily involves summary treatment of topics treated at greater length in previous estimates, and that such summaries may not give the full flavor of the lengthier discussion. It was generally agreed, however, that the present estimate fairly reflected the substance of earlier estimates; and the amendments adopted at the meeting made no changes in this respect."

2. Delete the last sentence.
